A New Method of Coagulating the Juice-The Rubber Industry in Brazil - The Tremendous Demand Constantly on the Increase.

[Chicago Times.] During the past twenty-five years the demand for India rubber has been con-1. The superintendent also stated that stantly increasing. The amount required the following prisoners would be discharged during the quarter ending Sep- ber shoes are now worn by people of all classes. Most men exposed to the snow and rain wear rubber boots. A kind of rubber shoe has been made expressly for protecting the boots made of belted wool, that are now so popular with lumbermen and others who work in the cold. Rub ber is now an ingredient in various kinds of paint. Every woman has a water proof cloak, and many men have water proof coats. A complete suit of water-proof garments from cap to shoes, can be obtained from any dealer in rubber clothing. The number and variety of articles now kept in rubber stores surprises a person who visits one for the first time. They embrace almost everything that is manufactured for ornament or use. The number of rubber toys is almost endless. Nearly every article that was once manu-factured from bone, horn, wood or metal is now made from rubber. From infancy to old age, during sickness and health, we are constantly using rubber in some form. Goodyear endowed it with new properties, and made it subserve purposes for which it could not be used in its natural state, while Mackintosh rendered it soluble, so that it could be incorporated in the fiber of cloth and other substances. The many uses to which rubber has been applied during the past forty years has caused its price to advance in all parts of the world where it is obtained natives of Brazil, from which most of the best rubber is obtained, once wasted most of the product of the rubber forests. Of late years they have relied on the money of the exports from the valley of the Amazon consists of rubber. The inhabi tants neglect all other industries for col-lecting rubber. With the finest pastures in the world, they eat jerked beef from the Argentine Repub-lic and canned meats from the United States. With vast supplies of excellent fish, which are casily they ear immense quantities of salt cod smoked herrings obtained from northern countries. With dense forests of the most valuable sorts of wood they import their furniture and most of their building materials. Not many months ago the price of crude rubber was 83 cents per pound at Para, and the average inhabitant could

A few years ago there was considerable governments of several European countries instructed their agents abroad to as supplied with rubber, which had become the employment of smoke is reported from Brazil. It is the invention of Antonia Bentes, of that country. A new source of supply has also been discovered in a tree from which rubber has not been obtained. which has been transmitted to Washing ton, is as follows:

"The mangaba or mangabelra, as it is called in Brazil, is a tree of medium size belonging to the apocynaca. It presents a graceful appearance, something like the weeping willow, with drooping branches and small oblong-shaped leaves of a glossy dark green, finely marked, and hav-ing a sharp rounded point at the apex. This tree yields an excellent rubber, but up to a few months ago, before my coming to this province, it was only esteemed on account of its fruit, which possesses a fine aroma, a delicious taste, and makes a preserve which is a great favorite with the Brazilians. This fruit is about the size of a large plum, of a yellowish color, marked with reddish spots or streaks. It is only fit to be eaten when it falls from the tree, as it is then perfectly rine. The mangabeira has therefore the uble advantage of bearing fruit which can be exported, and of yielding a valuable rubber. The inhabitants of this province of San Paulo re just beginning to realize the the vast stores of undeveloped wealth existing in their vast plains, and a fine quality f rubber will be exported which will soon rival that of Para in quality, if not in quantity. "The process of extracting milk from the mangaberra tree is very simple, and possesses great advantage over the serin gueiras of Para, as it is met with in large quantities in the most healthy localities. It flourishes only in sandy soil, and is therefore only encountered in unproduc-tive land unfit for the ordinary purposes. of agriculture. When the milk is about to be collected, each person must be sup-plied with about twenty large round tins as well as a large knife (facao). He should make oblique incisions in the tree, sloping downwards at a little distance from each other, all around the trunk cutting only the outer bark, and placing immediately on the ground below the cuts a basin or large tin which will collect the milk as it evudes. When full these tius can be emptied into a larger vessel. The same process is continued during the whole day, each person treating from ten to fifteen trees or more in this manner may weaken or kill it, as has so frequently occurred with the seringueira, the rubber
